

From: Vice Provost and Dean Robin L. Garrell
Sent: Monday, October 09, 2017 4:31 PM
Subject: Announcing ImaginePhD with Early Access for Students & Postdocs

UCLA Graduate Division

---

Dear Faculty:

We are excited to announce the launch of ImaginePhD – a free, online career exploration and planning tool designed specifically for Ph.D. students and postdoctoral scholars in humanities and social sciences. Mentors like you can share this tool with students or use it as a launchpad for career conversations at any stage in a student’s academic program.

ImaginePhD users are able to:

- assess their career-related skills, interests, and values
- explore careers paths appropriate to their disciplines
- create self-defined goals
- map out next steps for career and professional development success

Developed by experts from over 50 universities, ImaginePhD offers a unique platform that teaches PhDs about popular job sectors, search strategies, and how to transfer skills across settings. A similar site targeting STEM graduate students has over 100,000 Ph.D. users and continues to grow.

As a sponsor, UCLA has early access to the ImaginePhD site starting Monday, October 9, 2017. Students and postdocs can logon with the information below and create an individual account:

Website: imaginephd.com

Username: sponsor

Password: earlyaccess

Best regards,

Robin L. Garrell

Vice Provost for Graduate Education

Dean, Graduate Division

