The PhD Career Training Series Presents:

Facilitating Small Group Discussions

A POSTDOC CAREER SKILLS WORKSHOP

SPEAKER: Sally Krasne
Associate Professor, Physiology, UCLA
Past Director, UCLA ACCESS

November 30
4:00-6:00 PM, CNSI Presentation Space
Space limited!
RSVP: www.postdoc.ucla.edu/events/career-development/2013

This workshop aims to demonstrate outcomes resulting from different approaches to “teaching” small groups of learners. The workshop is relevant to optimizing learning outcomes from small groups such as those encountered in lab meetings, journal clubs, problem-based learning and seminar-based courses. The attendees will participate as group members. Chocolate is involved.

Speaker Bio: Sally Krasne is a physiologist and biophysicist who has served on the UCLA School of Medicine faculty since she joined the Department of Physiology in 1975. She earned her B.A. in Psychology and Ph.D. in Physiology at the University of California, Los Angeles. Dr. Krasne has been involved in the development of the medical school curriculum and co-chairs the first block of medical school. She is currently involved in research on how curricular components feed into student learning and in trying to dissect predictors of achievement in the curriculum and beyond the undergraduate medical education. Dr. Krasne is a past Director of UCLA ACCESS, the admission route and first-year program of graduate studies for 13 Ph.D.-granting departments and programs in the molecular, cell and integrative life sciences.
