The Ph.D. Career Planning Series Presents:

JEAN-LUC DOUMONT: Persuading Others

A PhD CAREER SKILLS SEMINAR

• Whatever your career path, the ability to persuade others of your ideas is an essential skill.
• How can you sell your ideas effectively?
• How can you better understand personal dynamics and effectively get your message across?

April 8th
Monday, 3:00 – 5:00PM
CNSI Auditorium

RSVP
Space is limited!
RSVP link:  http://persuadingothers.eventbrite.com

Interactive Practice Session with Dr. Doumont will follow the lecture from 5:30 – 6:30 in the CNSI 5th Floor Presentation Space and is limited to 25 participants. Please separately RSVP to scarroll@grad.ucla.edu with your name, status (postdoc, grad etc...) and department. Limited to UCLA grad students postdocs and faculty.

Jean-luc Doumont, Ph.D.
Co-founder, Principiae

➢ An engineer from the Louvain School of Engineering and PhD in applied physics from Stanford University.
➢ Jean-luc Doumont now devotes his time and energy to training engineers, scientists, business people, and other rational minds in effective communication, pedagogy, statistical thinking, and related themes.

The Ph.D. Career Planning Series is a collaborative project of:
  • Academic Services, UCLA Graduate Division
  • The California NanoSystems Institute (CNSI) • The Society of Postdoctoral Scholars at UCLA
  • David Geffen School of Medicine, Office of Postdoctoral Affairs in the Biosciences